A SOPHIE MAE ADVENTURE SERIES

THE MOST MAGICAL BEGINNING

“Pastor William replaced his hat and exited the house. Sophie Mae slammed and locked the door. Padding to the bedroom, Sophie Mae snuck inside and crawled into the bed with Grandma Hattie. “I won’t leave you.”

George the Great Cain had found a home in Spenwaller’s Traveling Circus, but times were changing, and the life of a traveling showman wore thin.

Discontent followed Ernest Wade throughout his life, and even the bright lights of the circus couldn’t heal his spirit.

But when the Spenwaller Circus rolls into Drycrop, a night of magic and intrigue may be just what Sophie Mae needs to ease the ongoing drought.

Under a single Big Top, the three unlikely characters embark on a journey of self-discovery to find the place where they belong.

THE MOST SPECTACULAR TRAVELING BOX

“She couldn’t afford to lose track of time and fall into madness like so many in her community.

Picking up the nub of a pencil from the floor, she crossed out the day's date—August 8, 1935.”

Sixteen-year-old Sophie Mae lives in the heartland during the dust bowl of 1935.

Life is a struggle until she finds a magical traveling box on her doorstep which delivers her to the Gardenia Estate, a lush property in Minnesota. The inhabitants are invisible and the house seems to have a mind of his own thanks to the residing magician.

A long and happy life among the residents of the Gardenia Estate is threatened by the meddling of a former resident bent on taking over the magician’s lab.

Sophie Mae feels mislead from the beginning and doesn’t know who to trust. One thing is for sure, her life is in danger, but this time not from starvation.

THE MOST PERILOUS SIDESHOW

“Betsy wanted to believe she was a victim of Brunhold, but the truth of her motivations was crueler. Every decision to this point was hers. Feigning interest in George for the potion and using the others’ goodwill were but a few.”

It's 1937, two years since Sophie Mae lost her memories of the Drycrop farm to the Most Spectacular Traveling box. Life in the Gardenia Estate continues to amaze with its circus magician who tinkers in his lab to find a growth potion for the country's ailing farms.

But change has overtaken the estate as a stranger in search of a potion to revive his own country ravaged by the Great War. Having an informant inside the estate confuses the invisible residents as they come to grips with the betrayal.

Join Sophie Mae and her Gardenia family on their search to uncover the most perilous of sideshows—the need for acceptance at all costs.

THE MOST MYSTIFYING POTION

“Sophie Mae hadn’t given any thought to the others in the house fading their potion. Billy and Dink had transitioned well, but they also did it willingly. What would be the effect of allowing a potion to fade naturally over time?”

George the Great enjoys creating magic potions, keeping Sophie Mae and the other Gardenia Estate residents shielded from the ravages of the Great Depression, allowing them to serve those in need.

On the cusp of a new decade, Sophie Mae learns the estate's magic is fading on every front. Thoughts are no longer read in the imagination room. Residents are shedding their side effects.

The potency of the plant growth potion will be tested as Sophie Mae travels back to Drycrop to reseed the land.

When two paths emerge, Sophie Mae knows what she must do.

ABOUT THE AUTHOR

As a free-range child, Mason Bell spent most summers and weekends outside where climbing trees and jumping fences were necessary skills. All that energy came from the sweet neighborhood grandmas who offered thick slices of cake for a bit of conversation about life back in the day. These stories, combined with the freedom to roam, spurred Mason's creativity and storytelling.

Mason Bell lives in South Texas with her husband and two cats, Frodo and Fat Hobbit.
